TOWNS MUST DEVELOP TRADE TO SUCCEED

E. D. Leach Tells Members of Chamber of Commerce.

DECLARES MERCHANTS MUST STAND AS UNIT

Speaker Says If People Are Going Away To Trade, Fault Lies with Merchants.

Elimination of the tendency of citizens to trade in other cities, mobilization of community capital and retention of high school and college graduates in local industries and commercial enterprises were recommended as guarantees of prosperity for any city by E. D. Leach at the noon luncheon of the chamber of commerce at the Y. M. C. A. building today. Mr. Leach, who is president of the Universal Mortgage and Discount company, of Newark, and former state fuel administrator, spoke on "Some Elements of Community Progress," or "A Home Made Town."

"Many people believe that by bringing in some great industry they can insure prosperity for their community," Mr. Leach declared. "I have found that the one-interest, one-man town usually does not amount to much. If a town is to be improved the responsibility rests entirely upon the shoulders of the men and women living in that town.

Must Develop Trade.

"One of the first requisites for community success is the development of all potential trade possible. If the merchants are not doing the business they should, if the people are going out of town to trade the primary fault lies with the merchants. They are either not giving the proper service, quality or prices or else the selling ability is not there.

"There should be absolute cooperation and confidence between merchants. If they don't stand as a unit there is something wrong. Buyers can not be expected to trust the merchants if they do not trust each other. Other business interests should stand united behind the merchants for the benefit of the community.

"Another fundamental of prosperity is mobilization of community capital. Citizens should be taught to invest their capital at home. If only a quarter of a million dollars were leaving the city each year, and I venture to say twice that much goes into outside investment, the result, it used at home, would be several new industries and expansion of old plant in a few years.

"Merchants and business men should stick together to prevent as far as possible business failures in a community. Failures hurt the community and consequently they indirectly affect every business interest in that community.

Retain Graduates.

"Another requisite for prosperity is retention of high-school and college graduates in home enterprises. I assume that Marion is like most other cities and I venture to say that few graduates of either the high school or colleges stay here after they have finished their education.

"The customary sentiment amongst the younger generation is that the home town is a good town to leave. This means that the best brains produced in the community are being absorbed by the industries and commercial enterprises of other cities. This attitude is entirely wrong, both from the standpoint of the young people themselves and from that of the city.

"They should be made to understand that Marion is the best place in the world for them to work out their destinies. Business men, backed by the chamber of commerce, should unite and see that there is a position waiting for every one of them when they graduate.

Would Be Glad To Come.

"In ten years with the application of these principles," Mr. Leach declared in conclusion, "Marion would be even more widely known than it is today as the home of the president. It would not be necessary to seek industries from elsewhere. All sorts of interests would be glad to come here. The prosperity of the community would be forever assured."

Before the introduction of Mr. Leach, Roy Clevenger and Jay Vaughan gave three minute talks on "Why I Belong to the Chamber of Commerce." Charles Petree, student representative of the Lincoln Memorial university, near Cumberland Gap, in Tennessee, spoke briefly on the aims of the school.

It was announced that the meeting of the chamber of commerce, April 5, would be a centennial luncheon as this date is nearest the actual centenary of Marion on which the organization meets. A more elaborate program than usual probably will be arranged.

Many investors are reducing the per-share-cost of their holdings	Many investors have stopped the sacrificing of stocks of sound companies and instead, have placed buying orders for shares of these same concerns at the present low price levels, thereby making the average-per-share-cost of their holdings, much lower.
Many of the present quotations reflect earnings rather than intrinsic values	Present market quotations on many of the industrials reflect earning powers rather than real values. With the coming business revival these shares should show decidedly better market prices because of increased earning powers.

FLOOD STAGE ON OHIO IS DUE

River Rising Today as Result of Excessive Rains.

STAGE EIGHTEEN FEET AT 9 O'CLOCK TODAY

Weather Forecaster Says 'Rise Will Not Go Above the Fifty-Two-Foot Mark.

Wheeling, March 15.—A flood stage on the Ohio within the next forty-eight hours as a result of excessive rains seems likely.

The Ohio river this morning was rising along its entire length, with side streams pouring torrents into the main channel.

The rise is a result of continuous rains of almost thirty-six hours duration which swept into the streams the last trace of accumulated winter snows. The rain fell here up until 8 o'clock this morning was 1.21 inches. Promise of a flood stage on the lower Ohio will hold back the water of the upper streams, causing a more serious situation than if the water were able to escape freely. Stage at 9 o'clock this morning was eighteen feet, four inches and rising.

To Reach Fifty-Two Tonight.

Cincinnati, March 15.—According to the latest predictions of the government weather forecaster, the Ohio river will not go above the fifty-two foot mark here.

He declared that stage would be reached late tonight. All day yesterday and throughout last night, the river rose rapidly and flood warnings were issued. But clearing weather today caused a sudden halt in the rise. Bottom lands along the Big and Little Miami rivers are under water.

Thirty-Nine in Ironton.

Ironton, March 15.—The Ohio river at noon today had reached a stage of thirty-nine feet one inch and was reported rising at the rate of six inches per hour. Fifty-one feet is flood stage here.

Rises Forty Feet.

Point Pleasant, W. Va., March 15.—A stage of forty feet was reached on the Ohio river here today, which is over the danger mark.

Lowlands were inundated and considerable damage caused. Several houses were under water.

Forty-six feet is expected. The river was rising about three-tenths of a foot an hour. Rainfall here exceeded 2.42 inches.

Ohio River Is Rising.

Cincinnati, March 15.—Danger of a flood along the Ohio river and its tributaries was seen today when the Ohio, swelled by heavy rains, started rising rapidly. Both the Big and Little Miami rivers are also rising and backwaters are inundating lowlands. Many farmers near here already have been compelled to leave their homes.

Hocking River Rises.

Athens, March 15.—The second heavy rise of the Hocking river of the winter, this morning, has residents of the low grounds throughout the valley fearful and many are moving out. Although the tributaries of the river are reported falling, the main stream is expected by night to reach the highest stage here in a decade. Fifteen years ago yesterday, a score of lives were lost in Athens and nearby towns and property damage in the millions was done when the Hocking river reached the highest stage ever known.

Held to Grand Jury.

James Groom was arrested late Tuesday afternoon for investigation. Groom was trying to pass a check for $7.65 at the store of William Mahaffey, on Silver street. The check was made out on the Fahey bank and payable to the account of Carl Good. Inquiry by Mr. Mahaffey disclosed that the check was a forgery and he notified the police. When arraigned before Mayor George W. Neely to answer an affidavit charging him with forgery, Groom entered a plea of guilty and was bound over to the grand jury under bond of $500. In default of bond he was sent to jail.

PART OF WHEAT CROP KILLED BY FROST

Fourteen Per Cent. Destroyed, Is Report.

Columbus, March 15.—A winter killing damage to Ohio wheat of fourteen per cent, is indicated in reports received by C. J. West, agricultural statistician of the state-federal crop reporting service, here, Mr. West announced today.

Two weeks ago the damage was estimated at ten per cent.

"There are no signs at present of an oats acreage much different from that of last year," declared Statistician West.

"Replies to an inquiry on the probable planting of corn are three to one in favor of an acreage as large as last year."

Miss Marie Creasap and Omar S. Goodrich, both of this city, secured a license to marry Tuesday afternoon.

OHIO JUDGES TERMED "HICKS" AND "RUBES"

Cleveland, March 15. — That judges from rural counties, called in to relieve the congestion of the Cuyahoga criminal docket are "hick" politicians from "rube" counties, is the charge made by Fred H. Caley, secretary of the Cleveland Automobile club, in his annual report made public today.

Caley scored the action of these unnamed judges in imposing light sentences upon violators of the automobile laws and then suspending the greater part of the sentence.

REPENTANCE THEME OF SERMON AT WESLEY

Miss Edna Banning Preaches to Large Crowd.

Repentance was the theme of the evangelistic sermon Tuesday evening by Miss Edna Banning at Wesley M. E. church. The meetings are well attended. A feature of last evening's service was a vocal duet by Mrs. A. W. Leonhart and Mrs. E. E. Kemmerly.

Miss Banning emphasized the absolute importance of repentance and declared that repentance was so important that Jesus took up the message where John did and went on preaching "Repent Ye." "Sorrow for sin, being sorry enough to go out of the sinning business and by the grace of God staying out, prove repentance," Miss Banning declared.

Miss Banning continued: "It is useless to try to win others until we have found salvation from our own sins. Then we must be forgiving. If we do not forgive others their sins against us we need not ask God to forgive us for our Lord said He will not do it. He can only forgive as we really and truly forgive others. We can not hold on to any grudges and say mean things and expect God to forgive us. We must give up our bad habits."

Miss Banning will speak each afternoon this week at 2:30 o'clock and each evening at 7:30 o'clock.

WORKERS SWINDLED BY FAKE LABOR BUREAU

Pay One Dollar Each for Jobs at Muscle Shoals.

Washington, March 15.—Large numbers of persons have been made victims of fraudulent advertising for labor in connection with the Muscle Shoals project near Florence, Alabama, it is said in a statement issued by the United States civil service commission.

It is stated by the commission that there has been brought to the attention recent advertising throughout the country in which persons out of work have been promised positions at the Muscle Shoals project, conditioned upon their paying a registration fee of one dollar each. It is said that large numbers of unemployed men have responded, paying the required registration fee and receiving nothing in return. It is understood that the matter is to be presented to the department of justice for investigation and possible prosecution.

BLUSHING BRIDE OF 100 CRUELLY JILTED

Kansas City, Mo., March 15. — Mrs. Emma McMahon, 100 years and four months old, went back to her embroidery work today. She was decidedly miffed.

She expected to be a bride today, but the groom-to-be, Sims "Toots" Berry, a robust youth of eighty, walked out on the wedding party just as the judge was ready to tie the knot. It was a jilt not be to taken lightly even by a bride of 100 summers. Berry had joined with the assembled friends and relatives in the jollity of the occasion.

MANY CONCERNS ARE INDICTED

Cement Manufacturers Named by Grand Jury.

INDIVIDUALS AND FIRMS ARE CALLED

Violation of Sherman Anti-Trust Law Alleged Against Twenty-Six Companies.

Chicago, March 15.—Twenty-six corporations manufacturing cement in the middle western states and 48 individuals, officers of the companies, were named in an indictment returned by the federal grand jury charging violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Charging that the law governing interstate traffic has been violated, the indictment alleges that the 26 companies have conspired to regulate the cement business in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Kentucky, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee and Arkansas.

It further states that 25,000,000 barrels of cement are made annually by the companies, which is 90 per cent of the amount manufactured in the middle western states and 25 per cent of the entire output of the United States.

There are eight counts in the indictment charging a combination in restraint of trade, conspiracy and a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. Among the concerns named are:

The Lehigh Portland Cement Co., Aetna Portland Cement Co., Alpha Portland Cement Co., Atlas Portland Cement Co., Cape Girardeau Portland Cement Co., Castalia Portland Cement Co., Continental Portland Cement Co., Crescent Portland Cement Co., Diamond Portland Cement Co., Huron Portland Cement Co., Indiana Portland Cement Co., Kosmos Portland Cement Co., Michigan Portland Cement Co., Nowaygo Portland Cement Co., Peerless Portland Cement Co., Peninsular Portland Cement Co., Universal Portland Cement Co., Wolverine Portland Cement Co., the Marquette Cement Manufacturing Co., the Wellston Iron Furnace Co. and the Sandusky Portland Cement Co.

The corporations and individuals are all members of the Midwest Cement Credit and Statistical Bureau, which also was named in the indictment.

The indictment is the result of a nation-wide investigation into the activities of the alleged "trust." Other investigations of the same corporations are being conducted from the office of Attorney General Daugherty in Washington, it was said.

UNROMANTIC COLLEGE HEAD ANGERS GIRLS

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 15.—Western Normal students are in a furore today over the announcement by President Waldo that no girls would be allowed to keep company with any man more than three hours at a time or twice a week. The leap of a Western Normal girl, made from a speeding automobile driven by John Ducal Dodge, young Detroit millionaire, a few days ago, had nothing to do with the order, the president declared.

Intense Storm Coming.

Washington, March 15.—A storm which may assume intensive proportions is developing over the Far West, the weather bureau announced today. Storm warnings remain displayed on the Atlantic coast from Norfolk, Virginia, to Atlantic City, New Jersey.

ARBOR AND BIRD DAY IS NAMED

Governor Designates April 7 for Trees and Birds.

Columbus, March 15.—"The youth of our state feel close kinship with primitive forces and find real joy in all the manifestations of nature," declared Governor Davis today in a proclamation designating April 7 as Arbor and Bird Day and calling upon all the schools throughout Ohio and upon all civic and allied organizations to observe the day.

"It is a thorough pleasure to the youth of our state," continued the governor, "to have an occasion for concerted effort looking to an increased planting of trees and shrubs and a safeguarding of the birds, such as arbor day affords. They need to know, too, of the great need of more attention to guarding and developing our forest lands.

"The rising generation must be imbued with the zeal to extend our state forests and to establish preserves where wild life may thrive abundantly. They need, also, to think of the civic virtue that resides in constructive efforts to beautify the home surroundings, the streets and boulevards, the school houses and other public buildings."

GIRL CASHIER ROBBED OF $6,800 IN STREET

Payroll Seized by Bandit, Who Flees in Taxi.

New York, March 15.—"A payroll bandit" yesterday held up Miss Mae Abel, cashier of Deutsch Brothers, a furniture firm, while she was on her way from the bank and escaped in a taxi with $6,800. The money was to have been used to pay off the firm's employes. The girl had the money wrapped in paper and was walking across the sidewalk from a taxicab when the bandit rushed at her, seized the package and jumped back into a taxi in which he had ridden up. Detectives gave chase and fired two shots into the air, but the driver of the fleeing taxi only put on more speed.

The bandit was described as very young and well dressed.

THIRTY-EIGHT ARE SAVED FROM FIRE

Hoboken, N. J., March 15.—Police and firemen rescued thirty-eight persons, including fifteen children, from a burning apartment house here early today.

The apartment and the Fisher-Sweeney bronze work, occupying almost an entire block, were razed. The loss is estimated at $130,000.

Occupants of the house were asleep when the fire, which started in the bronze plant, spread to the house. Patrolman Paul Hennessy, the first officer to arrive, gave the alarm and rescued a woman and three children, trapped in their rooms.

Some of the occupants of the house were overcome but none was seriously hurt.

Veterans Unemployment Day.

Columbus, March 15.—Designating March 20 as American legion unemployment day, Governor Davis, in a proclamation, urges Ohioans to aid in providing employment for the more than 40,000 unemployed Ohio veterans of the recent World war.

MINERS TAKE UP PARLEY TODAY

Anthracite Workers Meet with Operators.

EACH SIDE HAS GIVE AND TAKE PROGRAM

If Operators Agree To Renew Scale, Case Will Be Quickly Adjusted, Miners Say.

New York, March 15.—Anthracite miners, headed by John L. Lewis, international president, took up negotiations with the operators here this afternoon, set on one thing—forcing a suspension of work in the hard coal industry until May first, at least, unless the operators will agree to a renewal of the present agreement with guarantees of eleven months work in the next year.

Miners and operators agree that renewal of the present agreement will satisfactorily iron out anthracite differences. Each side has a give-and-take program aiming at peace on the basis of renewing the present contract. Yet it is the plan of the miners not to fall into any trap and they will not accept a new wage agreement without certain specific guarantees.

In the miners' camp is the fear that if the existing contract is renewed, anthracite men may find themselves in the same condition as bituminous workers who got increased wages but suffered by having their work period cut down to 125 days in the last year. If the operators will consent to renew the scale now in force for a period of two years and will guarantee eleven months work each year, there can be speedy adjustment of the case and the conferences can quickly end the miners declare.

TREATY AMENDMENT IS VOTED DOWN

Washington, March 15.—Ratification of the four-power Pacific treaty by the end of next week appeared assured today when leaders of both sides reached an agreement to limit debate, starting next Tuesday.

Additional evidence that the present line-up on the treaty is unlikely to be changed by continued speech making was provided today when a new amendment proposed by Senator Pittman, Democrat, of Nevada, was rejected by a vote of fifty to twenty-eight, or practically the same as resulted in the defeat yesterday of the amendments offered by Senators Robinson, Democrat, of Arkansas, and Walsh, Democrat, Montana.

GOVERNOR GETS EXPERTS' DATA

Economies Found in Operating Expenses.

SURVEY OF ACTIVITIES IN FORM OF REPORT

Saving at the Rate of $3,500,000 a Year Is Now Being Effected.

Columbus, March 15.—Governor Davis today received the report of the survey of the state government made by experts from several states.

Economies in Ohio operating expenses at the rate of $3,500,000 a year have been effected, the experts say, under the state reorganization during its first six months.

The survey, for which Governor Davis secured the services of persons from outside Ohio, as he said, to guard against any possible political bias, presents the first complete analysis of results under the new state plan for the first half year of its operation. Those conducting the survey were George E. Frazer, accountant, formerly with the United States shipping board; Alfred C. Sigerson, former statistician of Jones & Laughlin Steel company; Major Frank A. Crocker, former statistician on personnel, United States quartermaster corps, and Walter F. Dodd, Chicago lawyer and authority on state government procedure.

To begin with, the report finds a decrease in payrolls in the eight organization departments of $352,739.04, and a reduction in maintenance cost of $1,419,358.42 during the last half of 1921, as compared with the last half of 1920—making a total operating saving of $1,772,096.46 from July 1 to Dec. 31, last.

All statistics used, the Frazer report points out, are on the basis of the official figures of the state auditor, and are wholly a comparison between costs during the last six months of the previous administration and the first six months under the reorganization.

The report calls special attention, as indicating the influence of the reorganization system, that while the above reductions were being made during the same period payrolls in elective state offices and educational institutions, unaffected by the new plan, increased $247,897.93 ($163,557.12 of this being 1922 salary roll of general assembly), and maintenance costs in elective offices and miscellaneous offices not under the administrative code, rose $224,386.34.

Counting on these comparative results, Frazer and his associates express themselves as "fully satisfied" that the first six months' operation of the administrative code checked "the tendency to increased cost in the Ohio state government."

Coming to the subject of permanent improvements under the head of "Additions and Betterments," the report shows a large increase, represented almost entirely in money applied to the extensive highway construction program carried out last year which resulted in practically triple the mileage of roads being built than in the year before. Of a total increase of $4,094,773.97 on account of additions and betterments, $3,960,154.82 was expended in the department of highways and public works on the new road work. The next largest increase was of $127,260.64 in the department of education.

Frazer and his associates, referring to the maintenance costs in the eight administrative departments, conclude that the only increase shown, amounting to $200,030.64 in the department of highways and public works, is "properly explained by the increased attention given to the repairing of roads throughout the state." They pay a tribute to the department of public welfare, which showed a maintenance cost decrease of $1,165,388.53, in the face of an increase in institutional population of 1,014 people, and the transfer to the department of additional duties.

The report calls attention to a number of phases of state operation in which, in Frazer's opinion, the full benefit of the reorganization has not yet been made available under methods now in force, and makes specific recommendations for changes in the system as now carried out, and for further co-ordination of service. These recommendations deal with financial control by the finance department, improvement of purchasing, printing and contracting methods; systematization of traveling, inspectional, investigational and stenographic expenses, and preparation of a complete state building plan.

Frazer and his associates see possibilities of further reductions in personal service through dispensing with more employes in the fish and game division, the oil inspection division, the railroad division of the public utilities commission and the division of public works.

MARION PLANTS ABSORB NEARLY 700 UNEMPLOYED

Since First of Year and Fifty Are Added Tuesday.

IMPROVEMENT OF LAST FEW WEEKS MARKED

Many Manufacturers Predict a Return to Normal Conditions by June or July.

Absorption of between 600 and 700 unemployed by Marion industries has occurred since the first of the year, according to figures revealed in survey just completed. Combined reports reveal the fact that fifty new employes were added to the roles of various plants in the city Tuesday.

Improvement has been so marked in the last few weeks that many prominent manufacturers of the city are predicting a complete return to normal conditions by June or July. Figures show that there has been a steady improvement of business, particularly in the steel industry, since January 1.

On Full Time Schedule.

Many of the plants have taken on additional employes. The Commercial Steel company, which had been working on a three-day schedule, and the Osgood company, which was formerly working forty hours a week, are now a full time fifty-nine hours schedule. Similar encouraging conditions exist in many other plants of the city.

Improved conditions have not yet affected the textile industries and manufacturers of farm implements. Textile manufacturers are affected by unsettled conditions in the East and the absence of buying power among farmers is still being felt by the latter class of industries.

That conditions generally are improving is also reflected in reports of charitable organizations. The Red Cross and other organizations doing relief work report that the situation is gradually clearing up. "We had eight loaves of bread left Tuesday," Mrs. Esther Mack declared this morning. "That is the first time we have had a surplus since the period of industrial depression set in."

Plan Further Improvements.

State and county road work and maintenance-of-way improvement to be started by railroads as soon as the weather clears up is expected to further improve the unemployment situation. The state and county plan to spend $500,000 on Marion county roads this spring and summer and railroads also are contemplating extensive right-of-way improvements.

Track work on the railroads is expected to be in full swing in the next six weeks and it is estimated that approximately 100 more employes will be required. All of them will be drawn from the Marion district. The work contemplated includes replacement of rails ties and ballast.

BOWLING

Mucrialties in Danger.

Toledo, March 15—With a record pointwise low score 821 holding first place honors in the American Bowling congress here and several teams of good repute slated to roll tonight, it is the belief of tournament officials that the colors of the Mucrialties of Chicago, will be lowered. They have a standing of 1204.

Columbus, Ohio, Jamestown, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Oklahoma City, Indianapolis, Jamesville, Wisconsin, Ashtabula, Gary, Detroit, Newark, Ohio, Delphos, Toledo and Highland, Illinois, have teams entered.

First place narrowly escaped toppling last night in the late shift when the Smith Arcades of Cleveland, and the Ed Lands of Chicago, flailed the timber in merry fashion. The former totaled 2902, but two pins out of first place and the Chicagoans 2891. Another men on both teams drew splits in their last frames. Had Link, of the Arcades, shot a safe ball, the chances are the Cleveland five would have been in first place today.

FOOD

Food bears the same relation to the body that fuel does to the locomotive.

Without proper fuel, the locomotive becomes its progress and comes finally to a standstill.

The same is true of the body. Unless proper food is supplied the bodily functions can not proceed.

It is the aim of the TUROFF'S restaurant to provide proper food in correct proportions and to enhance its palatability and digestibility by scientific cooking.

MILK DISTRIBUTORS HOLD CONFERENCE

Discuss Plans for Cooperative Handling of Products.

Milk distributors of Marion and members of the advisory council representing the Marion district of the North Central Ohio Dairy Cooperative Sales association, met in conference at the county farm bureau office Tuesday afternoon. The meeting was held for the purpose of working out an agreement between producers and distributors relative to handling dairy products in the district.

At a mass meeting of the distributors at the court-house Monday evening it was decided that the membership was sufficiently strong to go ahead with the establishment of the cooperative plan of marketing the products and the question of making satisfactory arrangements for adopting this plan was placed in the hands of the advisory committee.

No definite plans were decided upon at the conference Tuesday afternoon. Further conferences will be held in the immediate future and it is expected that a final working agreement will be reached soon. Latest reports show that approximately 275 milk producers marketing in Marion are now enrolled in the district association.

TELLS OF RADIO AS AN AUXILIARY TO COMMERCE

Head of Radio Corporation of America Tells of Progress.

IMPORTANT POSITION DUE TO ITS UTILITY

Nally Predicts Radio Sets Will Become Vital Part of Home Equipment.

[Editors Note—Edward J. Nally, is the head of the Radio Corporation of America and one of the few great authorities on this comparatively new method of instant communication. While to many it is still a play thing to be classed with the phonograph those who are familiar with its possibilities declare it will do much to introduce a new era of communication between the furthest most points on the world's surface.]

[BY EDWARD J. NALLY.]

This brief outline of some of the aspects of radio is written from a viewpoint not often presented to the public at large. My purpose is to show it as an auxiliary to commerce rather than to stress the more familiar keynote of the "wonders of wireless" which have been the subject of many articles in the daily press. True it is very baffling, from a scientific 'reason why' standpoint but so is electricity, which no one has yet been able to define.

The single fact that radio communication is the one medium capable of placing isolated communities in instant touch with the centers of civilization has a boundless appeal to the imagination. That too it has forever ended the vast silences of the sea further adds to its romance. However, until it becomes a general household utility it will probably remain in the public mind as something very mysterious—a sort of witchcraft interesting, but making little appeal for intimate acquaintance, and comparatively few people realize that this means of communication has already a fixed place in the world's affairs, that is in fact an economic factor of major importance, and world wide in its applicability.

The Reason Why

The underlying reason for the rapid strides it has made is not because of its romantic intangible or mysterious nature. Its important position in the field of communication is due solely to its utility, in combination with the three essentials of accuracy, speed and economy.

In addition to providing mariners with weather reports storm signals and warnings of possible dangers to navigation. It enables passengers at sea to keep in touch with world affairs and with the movements of commerce and industry. Daily news bulletins are published on practically all of the ocean going vessels and transactions of great magnitude and of momentous importance are being carried on constantly between ship and shore through the medium of radio communication.

In its international application radio is today carrying overseas a very material percentage of the world's communications. Radiograms, commercial and social aggregating millions of words annually are being sent daily across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. These are regular paid communications, filed just as cablegrams are, and delivered with the accuracy and speed so essential to the users of long distance communications. Direct wireless service is maintained, night and day, with Great Britain, France, Germany, Norway, Hawaii and Japan at rates which are from four to twenty four cents a word lower than the cable rates. Economy being the keynote of commerce, the enormous total saving effected by the use of radio in the conduct of international communications makes it a matter of vital interest to every one, and this interest has manifested itself in the constantly growing number of countries which are adopting radio as a means of communication, and which are constructing wireless stations with which to carry on this communication direct with other countries already thus equipped.

A Radio Advantage.

Another great advantage possessed by radio is what might well be termed its universality, with reference to communication to several different points at the same time. This was illustrated on the occasion of the formal opening of Radio Central, a superpowered station of the Radio Corporation of America, located at a point on Long Island about sixty five miles distant from New York City. On November 5, 1921, President Harding threw a switch in the White House and a message which he had prepared for broadcasting to the world ran through a mechanical transmitter, and the words, carried by land wire to Radio Central, were flung into space without the intervening agency of a human hand.

The first answer came back instantly. Others followed close upon it. Acknowledgements were received from such widely scattered points as Norway, Germany, France, Italy, England, Belgium, Sweden, Hawaii, Canada, Cuba, Japan, New Zealand, Panama, Colombia, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras and Australia.

This fact of the universality of radio has a further application in the broadcasting of news, market, weather and crop reports, lectures, sermons, etc., through the medium of broadcasting stations which are in direct communication with thousands of wireless stations maintained by amateurs in all parts of the country, and in this respect it is of especial value to isolated communities, out of touch otherwise with current happenings and with the world's progress.

This branch of the radio service has awakened a wide interest in all parts of the world, and with the rapid development of the wireless telephone persons in remote districts as well as passengers at sea, are privileged to listen to concerts by famous artists in the large musical centers and to hear not the dots and dashes of the telegraph code, but the exact words of spoken addresses.

Not a day passes but our daily papers carry stories of new accomplishments in this direction, and I venture the prediction that in the not far distant future radio sets, for both telephone and telegraph, will be a vital part of the equipment of every American home.

In Kurdi tan music of any kind is looked upon as immoral.

Helps digestion
—and cleans a coated tongue

Thousands of men and women have found relief from various digestive disturbances by eating Fleischmann's Yeast.

It is human nature to want to find out "why." So far as science can tell us this is the reason.

Fleischmann's Yeast is a food abundant in certain elements which are necessary to health and life itself. It promotes the flow of bile and of pancreatic juice. It has a remarkably beneficial effect on the whole digestive process. It cleans a coated tongue.

Try Fleischmann's fresh yeast in orange juice or in milk. Men like it in milk shakes and malted milks. Women like it spread on bread or crackers.

Keep your digestion in the pink of condition and your tongue clean and healthy by eating 2 or 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast fresh every day before or between meals. Be sure it's Fleischmann's Yeast—the familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label. Place a standing order with your grocer today.

Twenty-one nations are said to be in arrears for their dues to the league of nations. Joining the league seems to have much the same effect on a nation as hiring an efficiency expert has on a corporation.

Let us hope for the comfort of the former that when Mr. Cox goes to Massachusetts to campaign against Senator Lodge the latter will not read some of the Coxian campaign speeches of 1920 in support of the Versailles treaty to him.

The Indianapolis man who has eleven wives says he is mentally irresponsible as the result of a blow on the head. Think of the deception he might have worked on the gentler sex had he received two or three bumps!

Getting right down to brass tacks, it's more that probable that the chief objection of Senators Johnson and Borah to the four-power treaty is the same as that of Publisher Hearst—Japan is a party to it. Senators LaFollette and Reed are against it, of course, as they have been against everything that has appealed to Americans generally.

DANGER LURKS THEREIN.

A man named Jeffries, who made a living in the prize ring as long as youth and strength permitted, and who subsequently conducted a barroom until prohibition ended that, has turned to the evangelistic platform as a field for further activities. He held his first dress rehearsal the other evening before a specially-invited audience. The gist of his message, as reported, was this: "Let your conscience be your guide. It's nobody's business if I want to swear, smoke and drink so long as my heart is right."

The standard of the saloon is approximately what the former pugilist upholds when he declares that it is "nobody's business" if he swears and drinks "so long as his heart is right." Mr. Jeffries' brand of religion—letting one's conscience be the guide—may be popular with some, but it is dangerous. Many individuals have consciences that are weak at best and slumbering most of the time. Because man's conscience is not dependable, he has man-made laws as well as God-made laws to rule his conduct and tell him what is right and what is wrong. Sometimes man-made laws go astray, but that is because the group conscience—the sum of all the little consciences—is not in itself always trustworthy. And the growth of man's conscience is not helped by self-adulation and buncombe.

The Jeffries case may be unimportant in itself. But it is important as one illustrative incident of a present—and, it is to be hoped, transient—phase of popularized religion. The temptation to inject the bizarre, the sensational, into pulpit and tabernacle is perhaps now at its height. It is a deplorable phase, cheapening religion and undermining respect for the church and its teachings. If the extremism of this broken-down pugilist, shall prove repulsive enough to restore sanity to evangelization, there should be rejoicing.

EXEMPLIFICATION OF A DOG'S GRIEF.

A dog's devotion to his master makes a man think. Even though he be kicked and buffeted around by a cruel master, the dog will humble himself and, crawling as close as he dare, will look up pleadingly and attempt to lick the hand that smote him. But fortunately there are more kind masters than cruel, for the average man who has a dog about him is kind to his canine friend. Many, indeed countless, stories have been written about the dog as "man's best friend." There are many commendable attributes about a dog's friendship—attributes that are often of finer quality than any exhibited by man.

Did you ever own a dog? If you never did, then you have never known much about the true heart of a dog.

Where is there a man who ever owned a canine pal that does not believe a dog feels genuine grief whenever something goes wrong with the master, who exhibits it all to his dog in many ways best known to the dog.

Did you ever notice a man kick at his dog when something did not go the way he expected it to go? The dog sneaked away perhaps in some corner to conceal himself until the storm had passed. At the sound of his master's voice again in its natural tones, the dog appeared to be filled with joy expressed by barking, or merely by wagging tail and eyes that mirrored something almost akin to human feelings.

From Wolfsboro, in New Hampshire, there comes a touching story. In that town a dog died under the window of a hospital, where his young master lay ill of typhoid fever.

Huddled beneath the window, as close to the wall as it possibly could get, this dog was found. The master had been taken to the hospital while his dog was away. Upon discovery of his master's absence, it visited all the old haunts. One day the family automobile went to the hospital. The dog followed—and discovered his master. It was left at the hospital door, but it jumped through a window and found its way to the master's cot, only to be ejected.

Then it was that the dog took up its vigil at the window. It could not be driven or coaxed away.

Physicians, according to press despatches, say that the dog actually died of grief after a long vigil.

Yes, we believe that dogs sometimes—nay, often—experience genuine sorrow.

A train of thought is not like a locomotive; it doesn't sound a warning at every dangerous crossing.

"Le Donier Cri in Worring" is the way the Ohio State Journal heads this one from the New York Evening Post: "There is always somebody who will keep his umbrella up long after the rain has stopped. Some people are still worrying lest Mr. Bryan should some day be elected president." We never will cease regretting that some miscreant made off with our invaluable dictionary containing that list of phrases from ancient and modern languages, thus depriving us of the means of making evident our erudition.

DESERVED TRIBUTE TO BERT WILLIAMS.

Egbert Austin Williams, the Danish negro comedian, known to the stage as Bert Williams, who died a short time ago at his home in New York City, was a notable example of the measure of progress which has been made in the educational status of the negro race in America.

Williams, who was only forty-six years of age, was born at New Providence, Nassau, in the British Bahamas. His grandfather, who was white, was Danish and Spanish consul to the Bahamas, and married a quadroon. When he was two years old Frederick Williams, father of the comedian, was brought to New York City, where he learned the trade of papiermache making, and this brought him into contact with theatrical people. "Bert" as a boy made his first acquaintances among New York stage folk through his father in this way.

Williams, the comedian, moved to Riverside, California, from New York. There he was graduated from Riverside High school. He was desirous of becoming a civil engineer, but his interest in things theatrical had always been so keen that he was unable to resist the urge and started out as a member of a little band of minstrels. He instantly leaped into popular favor, winning not only the good will of the public, but the respect of his associates. Leading producers speedily recognized his talents. As a member of the well known team of Williams & Walker, he played at the Shaftesbury theater in London and was invited to attend a lawn party at Buckingham palace to entertain guests at the birthday celebration of the Prince of Wales. That was in 1903. Williams so delighted royalty that he always remained a favorite with Londoners.

Williams came to be known, not only as the foremost comedian of his race, but as one of the foremost comedians of his time. Many people will feel a pang of regret today when they realize that they have seen for the last time the world-famous Williams walk and the screaming poker game pantomime, and that never again will they hear the voice that made gems of such songs as "Two Real Coons," "The Gold Bug," "Son of Ham" and "In Dahomey."

Bert Williams made millions laugh. He was dark skinned, but his soul was white, and he was admired as a man of talents who had risen to a place of high honor in the theatrical world.

LIFE'S VAUDEVILLE.

ANTICIPATION AND REALIZATION.

"I am giddy; expectation whirls me 'round
The imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchants my sense."

Goldsmith said of anticipation and realization:

"The hours we pass with happy prospects in view are more pleasing than those crowned with fruition. In the first instance, we cook the dish to our own appetite, in the latter, nature cooks it for us."

Addison remarked:

"We are apt to rely upon future prospects and become really expensive while we are only rich in possibility. We live up to our expectations, not to our possessions, and make our figure proportionable to what we may be, not to what we are."

There is more joy in anticipation than in realization, many times.

There is more happiness to be had from expectation than from fruition, often.

There is more pleasure in pursuit than in possession, as a rule.

It's the hazard of the game that invites—not the stake to be won.

It's the keen sport of the chase that lures—not the game killed.

Anticipation! Expectation! What fascinations they have!

Man never is blessed—but always to be blessed!

The devoted angler will fish—and continue to fish—when he isn't getting a bite, a nibble, even.

Expectation!

It isn't the book he has written that interests the author; it's the one he's going to write.

Anticipation!

Work done—is work dead.

Work planned—is work to be pursued and accomplished.

Realization is often as ashes upon the head.

Possession is frequently as acrid fruit to the lips.

For years and years women have declined to have the right to vote and hold office. They have entertained the vision; they have pursued the shadow. And now, that they have the substance in their hands—what? The Week, of Columbus, furnishes the following answer:

Declaring that they would "prefer to wash dishes rather than argue over a paving contract," and that "politics takes too much of a woman's time from her duties as a housewife," Mrs. Maude Arnold and Mrs. Helen Ludke, members of the Three Oaks city council, have resigned. Each has served a year in the council. "We didn't find politics to be what we thought it would be," said Mrs. Arnold.

Anticipation—and realization! Expectation—and fruition! Pursuit—and possession!

We men could have told women what their experience would be; but they wouldn't have listened.

They were in for disillusionment; and they've got it!

SENATE AND TREATY.

Writing of the four-power treaty which must now be approved by the United States, to become binding upon this country, the editor of the Ohio State Journal says:

"The treaty situation in the senate is rather curious. Most of the Republican members have changed their views on the principles which should underly our foreign relations, since the Versailles treaty was before them, and most of the Democrats have changed theirs."

When the Versailles treaty was up for consideration, nearly all the Democratic senators were favorable to it. They desired that America enter the league of nations, willy-nilly; they wanted the covenant of the league accepted by this government, without any reservations; they were more than willing that all the international interests and affairs of this country, and some of its internal interests and affairs, should be handed over to the control and direction of a foreign super-government. But now they shy away from a treaty which simply provides that, in case of international troubles, the signatories to the treaty shall hold council over what is best to do.

Yes, the Democratic senators have changed their views, apparently.

But have the Republican senators changed their views?

Not at all.

They are, as they were, willing that the United States shall enter into a pact with other nations, looking to the peace and welfare of the world—as long as America retains all her rights to independent judgment and action, where her own interests are concerned.

Republican senators have not changed their views.

The editor of the State Journal proceeds:

"While the treaties negotiated by the armament conference do not go so far as the Versailles treaty, their fundamental purposes is the same—alliance to make war less probable."

This statement is erroneous. The treaty now under consideration does not provide for an alliance of nations, in the accepted diplomatic sense of the term. True, the signatory powers agree to certain things, but they agree to do these things as individual nations—not as a group of allies. All the time the Republican senators have been willing to enter upon such an agreement.

However, the editor of the State Journal goes on:

"One would think that all the Democrats who supported the Versailles treaty would support these pending treaties, as being at least a step in what a few months ago they considered the right direction."

One would think so, if one did not know Democratic politics. But the Democratic senators played politics when the Versailles treaty was under consideration, and they're playing politics today. The editor of the State Journal is forced to admit:

"The lesser leaders of the Democratic party, who were so keen for a broad international policy when a Democrat was president, seem intent now only upon putting a Republican president in a hole."

That's it—that's exactly!

GRANTS WESLEY CHURCH PRIVATE SALE ORDER

Judge Mouser Awards Bertha Pryor Temporary Alimony.

JUDGE J. W. WRIGHT FINDS FOR DEFENDANT

In Washburn-Crosby Suit Against Bashford Baking Company for $810.37.

In the matter of the Wesley Methodist Episcopal church to sell real estate, an order of private sale was granted as prayed for in the common pleas court this morning by Judge Grant E. Mouser.

Allowed Temporary Alimony.

Temporary alimony in the sum of $75 was allowed the defendant in the divorce action of Holly W. Pryor against Bertha Pryor by Judge Grant E. Mouser, this morning. The sum is payable $25 March 25, $25 April 8 and $25 at the time of the hearing of the case.

Finds for Defendant.

Through Scofield, Durfee & Harder the Washburn-Crosby company filed an amended petition in the common pleas court Tuesday afternoon against the Basford Baking company for a judgment in the sum of $810.37 which the plaintiff claimed as damages suffered as a result of a breach of contract. An amended answer was filed by the plaintiff company through Attorneys Hoke Donithen and W. P. Moloney.

The case was heard before Judge J. W. Wright, of Bucyrus, Tuesday afternoon, a jury being waived. The judge reserved his decision until this morning when he returned a finding for the defendant and judgment against the plaintiff for costs. A motion for a new trial was filed by the plaintiff and overruled.

Gets Up General Denial

In the suit of William Parratt against Edward H. Cowan and others for a judgment in the sum of $50 alleged to be due for material and labor in repairing a house in December, 1920, the defendants filed an answer through Crissinger, Guthery & Strelitz, Tuesday afternoon, setting up a general denial.

Confirms Sale.

In the suit to marshal liens brought by Cleo C. Brown against Houston Bingham and others, Judge Grant E. Mouser, this morning, confirmed the sale and a deed and distribution of proceeds was ordered, a writ of possession being awarded the purchaser.

Asks $10,000 Damages.

Damages in the sum of $10,000 are asked for in a petition filed in the common pleas court this afternoon through Attorney J. H. Eymon by Gerald Wise, an infant, through his next best friend Edna E. Wise, against the Cotter Transfer & Storage company and the Great American Mutual Indemnity company. The suit is the result of Gerald Wise being run over by one of the tracks of the transfer company at the intersection of east Center street and Seffner avenue, November 3, 1921.

MANUFACTURERS MEET AT MARION SHOVEL PLANT

Inter-City Ad Club Furnishes Entertaining Program.

MEMBERS TOUR THREE INDUSTRIAL PLANTS

Professor Advocates Reserving Work of Prosperous Times for Times of Slumps.

"We must take the crest off of the wave of prosperity and carry it forward to fill up the trough of depression," declared Professor C. C. Arbuthnot, of the department of economics of Western Reserve university, this afternoon at a meeting of the Central Ohio Manufacturers' association in the dining room at the Marion Steam Shovel company plant. The importance of the part played by industrial journals in bringing about a return to normalcy was pointed out by Guy C. Townsend, of the McGraw-Hill Company, of New York. An address outlining the purposes of the Inter-City Ad club was delivered by G. H. Nablo, Upper Sandusky, president of the club. The entire program of entertainment at the monthly meeting of the manufacturers' association was furnished by the ad club. Upwards of seventy-five attended the banquet at the dining room of the Steam shovel plant this noon.

Tour Industrial Plants.

This morning was devoted to a tour of the plants of the Pollak Steel company, the Osgood company, the Commercial Steel company and the Power Manufacturing company. Shortly before noon, members of the Inter-City Ad club held their bi-monthly meeting. Members of the club are all advertising managers for plants whose products are not competitive. The meeting was devoted to a roundtable discussion of the problems of advertising. The banquet this noon consisted of a three-course dinner, served by the Marion Steam Shovel office girls. Music was furnished by the Marion Steam Shovel orchestra.

Prosperity Stimulated.

"Prosperity is not healthy, it is stimulated," continued Professor Arbuthnot in his address on "The Prevention of Industrial Depression." The cause of the stimulus is only temporary. During the recent war, all business was stimulated and business was enlarged to help win the war. It was up to us to do that part. But the second part of the inflation, such as the building of stations and improvement that could wait, should be postponed until the depression is beginning to be felt. We are all very wise during times of depression. What we must do is to carry this wisdom forward to the next period of good times and thereby avoid extremes either way."

"Today there are as many class publications as there are newspapers," declared Guy C. Townsend in his address on "The Relation of the Trade Journal to Industry." "The daily newspapers take an important part in shaping the opinion of the country and the trade journals play an equally important part in showing industry the way to progress which is the keynote of the return to prosperity." Mr. Townsend told the story of the founding of the first trade journal in 1795 up to the present time when there are about 2,300 class publications.

Grant H. Nablo, advertising manager of the Matthews Engineering company and president of the Inter-City Ad club, told of the purposes of the organization. He said in part: "It is our purpose to get the greatest results from the advertising appropriations of our firms." The motto of the club is "Keeping Alert."

INDIAN FOOTBALL TEAM TO REPRESENT MARION

Jim Thorpe, Famous Indian Athlete, To Head Team.

MARION ATHLETIC BODY AUTHORIZES PROJECT

Baseball Plans Include Possibility of Securing Some Major League Games.

At a meeting of the Marion Athletic association following a dinner at Bausinger's cafe on south Main street Tuesday evening, it was decided to have Marion represented with a professional football team the coming season. The big advertising feature for Marion is the result of the efforts of Walter Lingo, of LaRue, a member of the local association.

Mr. Lingo gave an outline of the plan and stated that he had lately returned from a western trip where he conferred with Jim Thorpe on the subject. Thorpe is to head an all-Indian team and will do the training at LaRue. The team will include Thorpe and Calac and three other all-American players, while the others will be Indian players of experience and ability. The team will do most of its playing on the road as a Marion team and play two or three games here. The local association unanimously favored the plan and authorized the football committee, headed by L. A. Axe, to close the deal with Mr. Lingo and report at the next meeting.

Plan for Baseball Season.

Plans for baseball for the coming season were also taken up. John L. Wickess, chairman of the baseball committee, reported that the committee had conferred with the Lincoln Park Playground association and formulated plans for conducting the sport the coming season. He outlined the plan and it met with the hearty favor of the members. It is the intention to play Sundays and holidays and if possible secure some major league attractions for the middle of the week. The matter of furthering plans was left to the baseball committee.

President C. A. Klunk was authorized to appoint captains who will select teams for a membership drive. These captains will be appointed at the next meeting to be held the evening of March 24 in the dining-room of the Hotel Marion.

Paul Casner, chairman of the boxing committee, announced that plans were being made for the next show to be held at the armory the evening of April 3. He gave an outline of some of the talent for the bouts and as it is to be a high-priced card, he stated that the committee did not feel like going ahead without having the sanction of the association. The members were so well pleased with the former efforts of the committee that the latter was instructed to use its own judgment. George T. Goran and Roy Abel talked on the merits of the coming boxing show with the fighters that are in view matched.

Talks of Race Meeting.

E. W. Boyer talked on the race meeting to be held the week of July 17. He explained the advantages to be gained as a result of holding the races that week and stated that he had received word from a number of owners of Grand Circuit horses in which they stated they would have stables of horses here. The meeting is expected to bring some of the best half-mile track horses in the country. A number of other members spoke on various lines of sport and the meeting was one of the most enthusiastic yet held.

Jacksonville, March 15. — Burleigh Grimes, star pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, is still a holdout.

Home Runs Features.

Pirates Inactive.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 15. — Rainy weather has kept the Pittsburgh Pirates inactive since their arrival here Sunday. Today they play their first full practice game. Catcher Walter Schmidt, of Modesto, California, who is a holdout, was practically wiped off the slate today and some of the younger element will be tried out for the receiving end.

Robertson To Get Chance.

Seguin, Texas, March 15. — Charley Robertson, right-hander, obtained by the White Sox from Minneapolis, will get his chance to show his class against the Giants today in the third exhibition game of the season. It is expected that Joss Barnes, hero of the world series, will start the game for the McGraw men.

Second Baseman Sought.

Catalina Island, Cal., March 15. —The second base problem is the chief worry just now of Manager Bill Killifer, of the Chicago Cubs. Elliott, Klugman and Frieberg, rookies, who have been tried at that position, have failed to show big league class. It is probable that Zeb Terry, former second baseman, who has been playing well at third, will be assigned to the hot corner and Johnny Kelleher, the regular third baseman, shifted to the keystone sack.

Heavy Hitting Feature.

Eagle Pass, Texas, March 15. — Heavy hitting was a feature of yesterday's game between Connie Mack's Hawks and Owls here. Frank Brasil led with four hits. The game was played in a sand storm.

Peckinpaugh in Good Shape.

Tampa, March 15. — The long winter layoff is noticeable among Clark Griffith's Nationals. Roger Peckinpaugh's batting eye is undimmed, however.

BOWLING

Marion Team Hits 2,490.

The Marion Athletic association bowling team rolling in the American Bowling Congress tournament Tuesday night failed to make much of a showing, but the players received a good limbering in preparation to bowl in the doubles and singles today. The locals only totalled 2,490, their work being erratic for the most part with plenty of misses of easy spares. The quintet lost 180 pins through misses and bumped into thirty-one splits. They were hitting for the latter, however, continually riding the ball into the head pin.

Schoenlaub, who finished fourth in the all-events last year by getting away with a 669 start in the team event, did not do so well last night, but led the locals with a total of 629 in the three games and still has a chance to finish strong. The scores of the team were as follows:

Schoenlaub, 173, 200, 156; E. Pierson, 159, 150, 160; Dugan, 147, 176, 142; Zeisler, 156, 168, 153; Pierson, 176, 179, 169. Grand total, 2,490.

CHAPTER XVII

Mr. Spearman Goes North.

The message, in blurred lettering and on the flimsy tissue paper of a carbon copy—that message which had brought tension to the offices of Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman and had called Constance Sherrill and her mother downtown where further information could be more quickly obtained—was handed to Constance by a clerk as soon as she entered her father's office. She reread it; it already had been repeated to her over the telephone.

"4:55 a. m. Frankfort Wireless station has received following message from Number 25: 'We have Benjamin Corvet of Chicago, aboard.'"

"You've received nothing later than this?" she asked.

"Nothing regarding Mr. Corvet, Miss Sherrill," the clerk replied.

"The crew?"

"Yes; we have just got the names of the crew." He took another copied sheet from among the pages and handed it to her, and she looked swiftly down the list of names until she found that of Alan Conrad.

Her eyes filled, blinding her, as she put the paper down, and began to take off her things. She had been clinging determinedly in her thought to the belief that Alan might not have been aboard the ferry. Alan's message, which had sent her father north to meet the ship, had implied plainly that some one whom Alan believed might be Uncle Benny was on Number 25; she had been fighting, these last few hours, against conviction that therefore Alan must be on the ferry, too.

She stood by the desk, as the clerk went out, looking through the papers which he had left with her. What she was reading was the carbon of the report prepared that morning and sent, at his rooms, to Henry, who was not yet down.

The last message read: "6:40, Petoskey is calling Manitowoc, 'Signals from Number 25, after becoming indistinct, failed entirely about 5:45, probably by failure of ship's power to supply current. Operator appears to have remained at key. From 5:25 to 5:43 we received disconnected messages, as follows: 'Have cleared another car . . . they are sticking to it down there . . . engine-room crew is also sticking . . . hell on car deck . . . everything smashed . . . they won't give up . . . sinking now . . . we're going . . . good-by . . . stuck to end . . . all they could . . . know this! . . . hand it to them . . . have cleared another car . . . sink . . . S. O. . . . Signals then entirely ceased."

Constance had not realized, until the reports of the wireless messages told her that he was gone, what companionship with Alan had come to mean to her. She had accepted it as always to be existent, somehow—a companionship which might be interrupted often but always to be formed again. It amazed her to find how firm a place he had found in her world of those close to her with whom she must always be intimately concerned.

The telephone switchboard beside Constance suddenly buzzed, and the operator, plugging in a connection, said: "Yes, sir; at once," and through the partitions of the private office on the other side, a man's heavy tones came to Constance. That was Henry's office, and in timbre, the voice was his, but it was so strange in other characteristics of expression that she waited an instant before saying to the clerk, "Mr. Spearman has come in?"

The clerk hesitated, but the continuance of the tone from the other side of the partition made reply superfluous. "Yes, Miss Sherrill."

Constance went to Henry's door and tapped. He made no answer and no move to open the door; so, after waiting a moment, she turned the knob and went in.

He was seated at his desk, facing her, his big hands before him; one of them held the telephone receiver. He put it slowly and put it upon the hook without the transmitter as he watched her with steady, silent, agonizing scrutiny. He did not rise; only after a moment he recollected that he had not done so and came to his feet. "Good morning, Connie," he said. "What's the news?"

The impulse which had brought her to his office went from her. She had not seen or heard from Henry directly since before Alan's telegram had come late yesterday afternoon; she had heard from her father only that he had informed Henry; that was all. "There's no news, Henry," she said. "I'll be going." She closed the door behind her, moving closer to him. "How did you happen to be here Connie?" he asked.

She made no reply but gazed at him ready for him. The agitation which he was trying to conceal was not entirely new to her coming in upon him; it had been ruling him before. It had explained the loudness and abuse of the words which she had overheard. That was no capricious outburst of temper or irritation; it had come from something which had seized and held him in his office, in dread—in dread; there was no other way to define her impression to herself. When she had opened the door and come in, he had looked up in dread, as though preparing himself for whatever she might announce. Now that the door shut them in alone, he approached her with arms offered. She stepped back, instinctively avoiding his embrace; and he stopped at once, but he had come quite close to her now.

As she stared at him, the clerk's voice came to her suddenly over the partition which separated the office from the larger room where the clerk was receiving some message over the telephone. Henry straightened, listened; as the voice stopped, his great, finely-shaped head sunk between his shoulders; he fumbled in his pocket for a cigar, and his big hands shook as he lighted it, without word of excuse to her. A strange feeling came to her that he felt what he dreaded approaching and was no longer conscious of her presence.

She heard footsteps in the larger room coming toward the office door. Henry was in suspense. A rap came at the door. He whitened, and wet his lips.

"Come in," he summoned.

One of the office girls entered, bringing a white page of paper with three or four lines of purple typewriting upon it which Constance recognized must be a transcript of a message just received.

She started forward at sight of it, forgetting everything else; but he took the paper as though he did not know she was there. He merely held it until the girl had gone out; even then he stood folding and unfolding it, and his eyes did not drop to the sheet.

The girl had said nothing at all but, having seen her, Constance was athrill; the girl had not been a bearer of bad news, that was sure; she brought some sort of good news! Constance, certain of it, moved nearer to Henry to read what he held. He looked down and read.

"What is it, Henry?"

His muscular reaction, as he read, had drawn the sheet away from her; he recovered himself almost instantly and gave the paper to her.

"8:35 a. m., Manitowoc, Wis.," she read. "The schooner Anna S. Solwerk has been sighted making for this port. She is not close enough for communication, but two lifeboats, additional to her own, can be plainly made out. It is believed that she must have picked up survivors of No. 25. She carries no wireless, so is unable to report. Tugs are going to her."

"Two lifeboats!" Constance cried. "That could mean that they all are saved or nearly all; doesn't it, Henry; doesn't it?"

He had read some other significance in it, she thought; or, from his greater understanding of conditions in the storm, he had been able to hold no hope from what had been reported. That was the only way she could explain to herself as he replied to her; that the word meant to him that men were saved and that therefore it was dismaying to him, could not come to her at once. When it came now, it went over her first only in the flash of incredulous question.

The telephone buzzer under his desk sounded; she drew close as he took up his receiver.

"Manitowoc?" he said. "I want to know what you've heard from the Solwerk. . . . You hear me? . . . The men the Solwerk picked up. You have the names yet?"

". . ."

"The Benton?"

". . ."

"Oh, I understand! All from the Benton. I see! . . . No; never mind their names. How about Number 25? Nothing more heard from them?"

Constance had caught his shoulder while he was speaking and now clung to it. Release—release of strain was going through him! she could feel it, and she heard it in his tones and saw it in his eyes.

"The steamer Number 25 rammed proved to have been the Benton," he told her. "The men are all from her. They had abandoned her in the small boats, and the Solwerk picked them up before the ferry found her."

He was not asking her to congratulate him upon the relief he felt; he had not so far forgotten himself as that. But it was plain to her that he was congratulating himself; it had been fear that he was feeling before—fear, she was beginning to understand, that those on the ferry had been saved.

Horror and amazement flowed in upon her with her realization of this in the man she had promised to marry. For an instant she stared at him, all her body tense; then, as she turned and went out, he followed her, calling her name. But, seeing the seamen in the larger office, he stopped, and she understood he was not willing to urge himself upon her in their presence.

"I'm willing to go home now, mother, if you wish," she said steadily.

When they had gone down to the street and were in the car Constance leaned back, closing her eyes; she feared her mother might wish to talk with her.

Toward three o'clock, the office called her, but only to report that they had heard from Mr. Sherrill. He had wired that he was going on from Manistique and would cross the straits from St. Ignace; messages from him were to be addressed to Petoskey. There was no other report except that vessels were still continuing the search for survivors, because the Indian Drum, which had been beating, was beating "short," causing the superstitions to be certain that, though some of the men from Number 25 were lost, some yet survived.

Constance thrilled as she heard that. She did not believe in the Drum; at least she had never thought she had really believed in it; she had only stirred to the idea of its being true. But if the Drum was beating, she was glad it was beating short. It was serving, at least, to keep the lake men more alert.

A little later, as Constance stood at the window, gazing out at the snow upon the lake, she drew back suddenly out of sight from the street, as she saw Henry's roadster appear out of the storm and stop before the house.

She waited in the room where she was. The strain he was under had not lessened, she could see; or rather, if she could trust her feeling at sight of him, it had lessened only slightly, and at the same time his power to resist it had been lessening too.

"I thought you'd want to know, Connie," he said, "so I came straight out. The Richardson's picked up one of the boats of the ferry."

"Uncle Benny and Alan Conrad were not in it," she returned; the triumph she had seen in him had told her that.

"No; it was the first boat put off by the ferry, with the passengers and cabin maid and some injured men of the crew."

"Were they — alive?" her voice hushed tensely.

"Yes; that is, they were able to revive them all; but it didn't seem possible to the Richardson's officers that anyone could be revived who had been exposed much longer than that; so the Richardson's given up the search, and some of the other ships that were searching have given up too, and gone on their course."

"I see; how many were in the boat?"

"Twelve, Connie."

"Then all the vessels up there won't give up yet!"

"Why not?"

"I was just talking with the office, Henry; they've heard again from the other end of the lake. The people up there say the Drum is beating, but it's beating short still!"

"Short!"

She saw Henry stiffen. "Yes," she said swiftly. "They say the Drum began sounding last night, and that at first it sounded for only two lives; it's kept on beating, but still is beating only for four. There were thirty-nine on the ferry—seven passengers and thirty-two crew. Twelve have been saved now; so until the Drum raises the beats to twenty-seven there is still a chance that someone will be saved."

Constance watched him with wonder at the effect of what she had told. The news of the Drum had shaken him from his triumph over Alan and Uncle Benny and over her. It had shaken him so that, though he remained with her some minutes more, he seemed to have forgotten the purpose of reconciliation with her which had brought him to the house.

She dined, or made pretence of dining, with her mother at seven. Her mother's voice went on and on about trifles, and Constance did not try to pay attention. Her thought was following Henry with ever-sharpening apprehension. She called the office in mid-evening; it would be open, she knew, for messages regarding Uncle Benny and Alan would be expected there. A clerk answered; no other news had been received; she then asked Henry's whereabouts.

"Mr. Spearman went north late this afternoon, Miss Sherrill," the clerk informed her.

"North! Where?"

"We are to communicate with him this evening to Grand Rapids; after that, to Petoskey."

Constance could hear her own heart beat. Why had Henry gone, she wondered; not, certainly, to aid the search. He had gone to—hinder it?

GARIS' BEDTIME STORIES

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE DANGER SIGN.

[BY HOWARD R. GARIS.]

[Copyright 1922, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

"Where are ou going today, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, the muskrat lady housekeeper, as she saw the bunny rabbit gentleman taking his fur cap, with ear tabs, down off the mantel.

In answer Mr. Longears held something up so Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy could see.

"Oh, skates!" exclaimed the muskrat lady. "Are you going skating?"

"I am if I can find any ice," answered the bunny. "It is getting so near spring that perhaps none of the ponds will be frozen. But I feel like skating this morning, so that's where I'm going, and maybe I will have an adventure."

"Well, I hope it's a good one," said Nurse Jane. "But I'm almost sure it will be an exciting one."

"So much the better!" chuckled the bunny, as he hopped away over the fields and through the woods with his skates slung in a piece of wild grape vine strap on his back.

Uncle Wiggily first came to a little pond about as large as a breakfast orange. It was well frozen, the ice being very hard, but the trouble was Uncle Wiggily could put only one skate on at a time, as the pond was so very little.

You aren't a bit dangerous!

"I can't do any skating here," said the bunny, with a twinkle of his pink nose. "I must have two paws on the ice. I shall look farther."

On he hopped and soon he came to a pond as large as a baseball field. But this pond was so large and there was so much water in it, that it only had a thin skim of ice on it.

"And that ice will never hold me," said the bunny, as he tossed out a stone, which broke "plump!" right through the ice. "I must look farther," thought Uncle Wiggily.

On he bounced, and soon he came to a third pond, as large as your back yard, and this seemed to be froze over just right, at least around the edges.

"Ah, I shall have a fine time here!" said the rabbit uncle. He fastened on his skates and began cutting curlicues around the edges. Then, as there was no one to watch him, Uncle Wiggily thought it would be all right to do a few tricks out in the middle of the frozen pond. He skated toward the center, but, all of a sudden, the ice began to crack and sink down in the middle. Uncle Wiggily stopped short.

"I'd better not go out there," he said to himself. "The ice isn't thick enough in the middle. It's dangerous there! It's all right around the edges but dangerous in the middle. And I must put up a sign saying so. Otherwise, when I go away, some of the animal children will come here to skate and they will break through the ice and slip into the water. I'll put up a DANGER sign!"

Uncle Wiggily found a piece of white birch bark, and with the end of a fire-blackened stick he printed on his sign the word.

DANGER!

"Now, I'll fasten it on a pole and stick it up in a crack in the ice and the animal children will keep away," thought the bunny.

He was just placing the danger sign upright in a crack of the ice, as near the middle of the pond as he dared to go, when, all of a sudden, a most unpleasant voice laughed:

"Ha! Ha! Ha!"

Looking toward shore, Uncle Wiggily saw the Bob Cat.

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" laughed the Bob Cat again. "That's funny! Very funny!"

"What is funny?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"That sign, saying you're dangerous!" chuckled the Bob Cat. "Why, you aren't dangerous! You can't bite, you can only nibble bark and cabbage. You can't scratch, for you haven't any claws! What makes you carry a sign saying you're dangerous? I'm not afraid of you! I'm coming right over there now and nibble your ears! You aren't a bit dangerous!"

"This sign isn't about me!" said Uncle Wiggily. "It means something else is dangerous, and—"

"Oh, ho! You can't fool me!" howled the Bob Cat. "You're carrying that danger sign, thinking you can scare me away. But I know you aren't dangerous and here I come to get you!"

With that the bad Bob Cat rushed out from shore across the ice toward the bunny, who stood near the middle. The Bob Cat went so fast that he couldn't stop when he wanted to, but he slid right to the dangerous part of the pond where the ice was thin.

"Crack!" went the ice, breaking, and letting the Bob Cat down into the cold water.

"Oh, wow!" spluttered the unpleasant creature.

"Ha! Ha! Maybe you'll believe me now!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. He put the danger sign in a crack in the ice, as near the hole as he dared to go, and then, leaving the Bob Cat in the icy water, the bunny skated to shore and hopped safely home.

It was a long while before the Bob Cat got out, and the animal children, heeding the danger sign, and keeping away from the middle of the pond, had fun skating. So everything came out all right.

New lakes and rivers have recently been discovered in the Rocky mountains by aerial observers.
